This restaurant interior effortlessly combines great fondness for classical values with passion for contemporary elegance. These are the two key elements of the design principles. The Italian restaurant is located in the Art Nouveau district of Riga and is planned to host up to 70 guests. The client was interested in creating a design restaurant that would become a landmark in the well-established restaurant quarter. Visible through the large windows, the interior works as an open invitation to come inside and join in. The vertical stripes on the wall, ceiling and floor finishing materials set a slightly surreal mood. The sandy oak wall panelling contrasts with the ever-changing game of reflections in the mirrors. Framed artwork is hung on the mirrors and walls to enhance the lightness of the room. The refined colour palette includes closely selected shades of beige combined with smoky blues and violets.
